FOREWORD

1. Experience in our country shows that more often than not the police, through its conventional methods of investigation and use of undisclosed sources of information, succeeds in solving a criminal case and catching the real culprits but in alarmingly big ratio of such cases the culprits manage to obtain acquittal either from the trial court or through the appellate process. In majority of such cases acquittals are earned by the culprits mainly because the evidence produced by the police/prosecution before the court is either insufficient or not of the standard required by the law. This malady underscores the importance of realizing that the purpose of investigation is not just to nab a criminal but, more importantly, to bring him to justice and that is possible only where the investigation is carried out with the objective of collecting and then producing before the court such evidence which meets the legal requirements and is sufficient in the eyes of law to secure a conviction. Hence, apart from training the investigators in the skills of investigation there appears to be a pressing need for educating them in the field of requisite ingredients of various penal provisions, the onus of proving the said ingredients and the standards of proof required in that regard.

2. In the above mentioned backdrop it is felt necessary and useful to prepare separate Manuals for different penal legislative instruments clearly specifying the necessary ingredients of the relevant penal provisions contained therein and the onus and standard of proof required by the law for such penal provisions. Such an exercise may help in developing a checklist for all such offences which checklist may be utilized by the investigating officers before finalizing the investigation and by the Prosecution Branch before forwarding a Challan before the court. It is understood that availability and use of such Manuals may contribute significantly towards capacity building of the police, prosecutors and lawyers for better results in the courts. As a first step, the present Manual has been prepared in respect of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.

3. In its present amended shape the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 comprises of 40 sections and four Schedules. As this study is concerned only with the offences mentioned in and dealt with by the said Act and investigation regarding the same, therefore, the following provisions of the Act are relevant in the present context:

   Section 6: Definition of ‘terrorism’ specifying the mens rea and the actus reus necessary to constitute the offence
   Section 8: Acts intended or likely to stir up sectarian hatred
   Section 11-F: Offences in respect of proscribed organizations
   Section 11-G: Offence in respect of uniform, etc. of a proscribed organization
   Section 11-H: Fund raising for terrorism
   Section 11-I: Use and possession of funds for terrorism
   Section 11-J: Funding arrangements for terrorism
   Section 11-K: Money-laundering of terrorist property
   Section 11-V: Directing terrorist activities
   Section 11-W: Printing, publishing or disseminating material to incite or giving projection to any convicted terrorist, proscribed organization, organization kept under observation or anyone concerned in terrorism
Section 11-X: Responsibility for creating civil commotion
Section 21-A(6): Disclosure about or interference with terrorist investigation
Section 21-C: Weapons training and training in terrorism
Section 21-H: Conditional admissibility of confession
Section 21-I: Aiding and abetting an act under this Act
Section 21-J: Harbouring a person involved in an offence under this Act
Section 21-L: Punishment for an absconder
Section 27: Punishment for defective investigation
Third Schedule: List of offences exclusively triable by an Anti-Terrorism Court

4. This Manual consists of 14 Chapters dealing with definition of terrorism, various offences specified in the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997, basic ingredients required to prove such offences in a court of law and proper completion of the process of investigation in respect of such offences.

Chapter 1
Defining Terrorism

Changing definitions of ‘terrorism’

1.1 Like its counterparts in rest of the world Pakistan has also been groping for the last many decades to find a suitable and appropriate definition of terrorism. Ever since the introduction of anti-terrorism laws in our country our legislature has constantly been in search of an apt definition of terrorism and in the process different laws have been enacted from time to time and different definitions of terrorism have been introduced at different occasions. In such definitions emphasis has been placed upon different aspects at different times. Although Suppression of Terrorist Activities (Special Courts) Act, 1974, Special Courts for Speedy Trials Ordinance, 1987, Terrorist Affected Areas (Special Courts) Ordinance, 1990, Special Courts for Speedy Trials Ordinance, 1991, Special Courts for Speedy Trials Act, 1992 and many other laws were also enacted in this regard from time to time yet for the present purposes focus may be kept mainly on the two major enactments in this field, i.e. the Suppression of Terrorist Activities (Special Courts) Act, 1975 and the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 (Annexure).

1.2 The first major piece of legislation introduced in Pakistan specifically in the context of terrorism was the Suppression of Terrorist Activities (Special Courts) Act, 1975 and the Preamble of that Act delineating the purposes of introduction of that Act provided as follows:

“Whereas it is expedient to make special provisions for the purposes of suppressing acts of sabotage, subversion and terrorism and to provide for speedy trial of offences committed in furtherance of or in connection with such acts.”

According to section 4(1) of that Act “Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code the scheduled offences shall be triable exclusively by a Special Court”. Section 2(b) of the Act provided that “‘Scheduled offence’ means an offence specified in the Schedule” and the Schedule (as subsequently amended from time to time) read as under:

“(a) Any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Pakistan Penal Code, 1860 (XLV of 1860) namely:-
(ii) section 216 if committed in relation to an offender who is accused of having committed any of the offences specified in this Schedule;
(ii)(a) section 302 or section 307 if committed in the course of the same transaction in which an offence specified in this paragraph or paragraphs (b) and (c) is committed or in addition to or in combination with such offence;
(iii) sections 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398 and 399, if a cannon, grenade, bomb, rocket or an arm of a prohibited bore is used for, or any public property is stolen, destroyed or damaged in, the commission of the offence; or

(iv) section 435, 436, 437, 438 and 440, if an explosive substance, mineral oil or any product of mineral oil is used for the commission of the offence;

(b) Any offence punishable under the Explosive Substances Act, 1908 (XI of 1908);

c) Any offence punishable under the Arms Act, 1878 (XI of 1878), or any offence punishable under any of the following sections for the West Pakistan Arms Ordinance, 1965 (West Pakistan Ordinance No. XX of 1965), namely sections 8, 9 and 10, if committed in respect of a cannon, grenade, bomb or rocket, or a light or heavy automatic or semi-automatic weapon such as Kalashnikov, a G-III rifle or any other type of assault rifle;

(cc) Any offence punishable under section 13-A or section 13-B of the Pakistan Arms Ordinance, 1965 (West Pakistan Ordinance of 1965);

d) Any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), namely sections 126, 127 and 128;

e) Any offence punishable under section 25 of the Telegraph Act, 1885 (XIII of 1885);

f) Any offence punishable under rule 29 of the Aircraft Rules, 1937;

g) Any offence punishable under rule 43 of the Defence of Pakistan Rules;

h) Any offence punishable under sub-section (1) of section 13 of the Anti-National Activities Act, 1974 (VII of 1974), if such offence constitutes anti-national activity within the meaning of sub-clause (i) or sub-clause (ii) of clause (a) of section 2 of that Act; and

(i) Any attempt or conspiracy to commit, or any abetment of, any of the aforesaid offences.”

It is of critical importance to point out here that although the word terrorism had been used in the Preamble of the said Act yet the same had not been defined in the Act at all and the Schedule of that Act created an impression that the word terrorism was to be understood in the context of any offence of serious and grave nature.

1.3 The Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 was a major step forward in Pakistan’s quest for dealing with the menace of terrorism and its Preamble provided as follows:

“Whereas it is expedient to provide for the prevention of terrorism, sectarian violence and for speedy trial of heinous offences and for matters connected therewith and incidental thereto”.

Section 12 of the Act conferred jurisdiction to try the scheduled offences exclusively upon the Special Courts constituted under the said Act. Section 6 of that Act defined a ‘terrorist act’ in the following terms:
“Whoever, to strike terror in the people, or any section of the people, or to alienate any section of the people or to adversely affect harmony among different sections of the people, does any act or thing by using bombs, dynamite or other explosive or inflammable substances, or fire-arms, or other lethal weapons or poisons or noxious gases or chemicals or other substances of a hazardous nature in such a manner as to cause, or to be likely to cause the death of, or injury to, any person or persons, or damage to, or destruction of, property or disruption of any supplies of services essential to the life of the community or displays fire-arms, or threatens with the use of force public servants in order to prevent them from discharging their lawful duties commits a terrorist act.”

Section 7 of the Act specified various punishments for the terrorist acts mentioned in section 6, section 8 defined an offence regarding stirring up sectarian hatred and section 9 of the said Act provided for punishment for the offence under section 8. The Schedule of the said Act read as follows:

1. Any offence punishable under this Act.
2. Any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Pakistan Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), namely:-
   (a) section 302, --
       (i) if committed with a cannon, grenade, bomb, rocket or a light or heavy automatic weapon;
       (ii) if the victim is a member of police, armed forces or civil armed forces or is a public servant;
       (iii) if there is more than one victim; or
       (iv) the victim was subjected to cruelty, brutality, torture or burning; and
4. Any attempt or conspiracy to commit or any abetment of any of the aforesaid offences.”

The essence of a ‘terrorist act’ defined by this Act was striking terror in the people or any section of the people or alienating any section of the people or adversely affecting harmony among different sections of the people. The emphasis appeared to be on the gravity of the offence and its effect upon the general populace rather than on the actual motivation behind the act.

1.4 The above mentioned definition of a ‘terrorist act’ contained in section 6 was subsequently amended through the Anti-Terrorism (Second Amendment) Ordinance, 1999 (Ordinance No. XIII of 1999) and the new definition read as follows:

“A person is said to commit a terrorist act if he –
(a) in order to, or if the effect of his actions will be to, strike terror or create a sense of fear and insecurity in the people, or any section of the people, does any act or thing by using bombs, dynamite or other explosive or inflammable substances, or such fire-arms or other lethal weapons as may be notified, or poisons or noxious gases or chemicals, in such a manner as to cause, or be likely to cause, the death of, or injury to, any person or persons, or damage to, or destruction of, property on a large scale, or a widespread disruption of supplies of services essential to the life of the community, or threatens with the use of force public servants in order to prevent them from discharging their lawful duties; or

(b) commits a scheduled offence, the effect of which will be, or be likely to be, to strike terror, or create a sense of fear and insecurity in the people, or any section of the people or to adversely affect harmony among different sections of the people; or

(c) commits an act of gang rape, child molestation, or robbery coupled with rape as specified in the Schedule to this Act; or

(d) commits an act of civil commotion as specified in section 7-A.”

Through this amendment the focus on the effect of the action was extended to a potential or likely effect besides the actual effect of the action and the focal point still remained the effect of the action rather than the incentive or inspiration behind the same.

1.5 It is important to mention here that while providing in the amended section 6 that “in order to, or if the effect of his actions will be to, strike terror or create a sense of fear and insecurity in the people, or any section of the people, does any act or thing --- ” the legislature never specified the motivation for that “act or thing” on the part of the perpetrator which propelled or prompted him to commit a terrorist act. Thus, the actus reus (the action) was itself considered to be determinative if the same was intended to create fear and insecurity, etc. in the public at large, had the effect of creating such fear and insecurity, etc. or had a potential for creating such fear and insecurity, etc. According to this definition what was of paramount consideration was the effect of the act, whether actual, intended or potential, and not the design or the purpose behind that act.

1.6 On August 15, 2001 the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 was drastically amended through the Anti-Terrorism (Amendment) Ordinance, 2001 (Ordinance No. XXXIX of 2001). Through the amending Ordinance the Schedule of the Act containing various offences to be tried under the said Act was done away with and the term ‘terrorist act’ with its definition contained in section 6 of the Act was substituted and replaced by the term ‘terrorism’ with the following definition thereof:

“(1) In this Act “terrorism” means the use or threat of action where:

(a) the action falls within the meaning of sub-section (2), and

(b) the use or threat is designed to coerce and intimidate or overawe the Government or the public or a section of the public or community or sect or create a sense of fear or insecurity in society; or

(c) the use or threat is made for the purpose of advancing a religious, sectarian or ethnic cause.
(2) An “action” shall fall within the meaning of sub-section (1), if it:
(a) involves the doing of anything that causes death;
(b) involves grievous violence against a person or grievous bodily injury or harm to a person;
(c) involves grievous damage to property;
(d) involves the doing of anything that is likely to cause death or endangers a person’s life;
(e) involves kidnapping for ransom, hostage-taking or hijacking;
(f) incites hatred and contempt on religious, sectarian or ethnic basis to stir up violence or cause internal disturbance;
(g) involves stoning, brick-battling or any other form of mischief to spread panic;
(h) involves firing on religious congregations, mosques, imambargahs, churches, temples and all other places of worship, or random firing to spread panic, or involves any forcible takeover of mosques or other places of worship;
(i) creates a serious risk to safety of the public or a section of the public, or is designed to frighten the general public and thereby prevent them from coming out and carrying on their lawful trade and daily business, and disrupts civic life;
(j) involves the burning of vehicles or any other serious form of arson;
(k) involves extortion of money ("bhatta") or property;
(l) is designed to seriously interfere with or seriously disrupt a communications system or public utility service;
(m) involves serious coercion or intimidation of a public servant in order to force him to discharge or to refrain from discharging his lawful duties; or
(n) involves serious violence against a member of the police force, armed forces, civil armed forces, or a public servant.

(3) The use or threat of use of any action falling within sub-section (2), which involves the use of fire-arms, explosives or any other weapon, is terrorism, whether or not sub-section 1(c) is satisfied.

(4) In this section “action” includes any act done for the benefit of a proscribed organization.

(5) In this Act, terrorism includes any act done for the benefit of a proscribed organization.

(6) A person who commits an offence under this section or any other provision of this Act, shall be guilty of an act of terrorism.

(7) In this Act, a “terrorist” means:
(a) a person who has committed an offence of terrorism under this Act, and is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism;
(b) a person who is or has been, whether before or after the coming into force of this Act, concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism, shall also be included in the meaning given in clause (a) above.”

1.7 The resume of our legislative developments in the field of terrorism shows that with different laws and definitions of terrorist act or terrorism the emphasis has been shifting from one criterion to another including the gravity of the act, lethal nature of the weapon used, plurality of culprits, number of victims, impact created by the act and effect of fear and insecurity brought about or likely to be created in the society by the action. The last definition of a ‘terrorist act’ contained in section 6 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 squarely focused on the effect of fear and insecurity intended to be created by the act or actually created by the act or the act having the potential of creating such an effect of fear and insecurity in the society. It, however, appears that subsequently the legislature did not feel convinced of the aptness or correctness of that definition and resultantly the erstwhile definition of a ‘terrorist act’ contained in section 6 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 was repealed and a totally fresh and new definition of ‘terrorism’ was introduced through an amended section 6 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 and this was accomplished through the Anti-Terrorism (Amendment) Ordinance, 2001 (Ordinance No. XXXIX of 2001) promulgated on 15.08.2001. The legislature had probably realized by then that an effect of an act may not always be a correct indicator of the nature of such an act as every crime, especially of violence against person or property, does create some sense of fear and insecurity in some section of the society and a definition of terrorism based upon the magnitude or potential of an effect created or intended to be created or having a potential of creating would necessarily require a premature, speculative and imaginary quantification of the effect so as to determine the nature of the act in order to decide about the jurisdiction of a criminal court to try such an act. That surely was an unsure test and the result of such a premature, speculative and presumptive test could vary from court to court and from Judge to Judge. The new definition of ‘terrorism’ introduced through the amended section 6 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 as it stands today appears to be the most comprehensive and the clearest definition of ‘terrorism’ introduced in our legal system thus far. It appears that in its quest for an apt and appropriate definition of terrorism and after stumbling through various approaches in that regard the legislature in our country has finally hit upon a definition of terrorism which is not only closest to its real meaning but the same is also in accord with the international perceptions about the same. The earlier emphasis on the speculative effect of the act has now given way to a clearly defined mens rea (the intention) and actus reus (the action). The amended section 6(1)(b) now specifies the ‘design’ and section 6(1)(c) earmarks the ‘purpose’ which should be the motivation for the act and the actus reus has been clearly mentioned in section 6(2)(a) to (n) and now it is only when the actus reus specified in section 6(2) is accompanied by the requisite mens rea provided for in section 6(1)(b) or (c) that an action can be termed as ‘terrorism’. Thus, it is no longer the fear or insecurity actually created or intended to be created or likely to be created which would determine whether the action qualifies to be termed as terrorism or not but it is now the intent and motivation behind the action which would be determinative of the issue irrespective of the fact whether any fear and insecurity was actually created or not. After this amendment in section 6 an action can now be termed as terrorism if the use or threat of that action “is designed to coerce and intimidate or overawe the Government or the public or a section of the public or community or sect” or if such action is designed to “create a sense of fear or insecurity in society” or the use or threat is made for the purpose of advancing a religious, sectarian or ethnic cause. Now creating fear or insecurity in the society is not by itself terrorism unless the motive itself is to create fear or insecurity in the society and not when fear or insecurity is just a by-product, a fall out or an unintended consequence of a private crime. In the last definition the focus was on the action and its result whereas in the present definition the emphasis appears to be on the motivation and objective and not on the result. Through this amendment the legislature seems to have finally appreciated that mere shock, horror, dread or disgust created or likely to be created in the society does not transform a private crime into terrorism but terrorism as an ‘ism’ is a totally different concept which denotes commission of a crime with the object and purpose of destabilizing the society or government with a view to achieve objectives which are political in the extended sense of the word. This approach appears to be in harmony with the emerging international perception about terrorism. This metamorphosis in the anti-terrorism law in our country has brought about a sea change in the whole concept as we have understood it in the past and it is, therefore, of paramount importance for all concerned to understand this conceptual modification and transformation in its true perspective.

1.8 The above mentioned change of meanings and emphasis in the definition of ‘terrorism’ had been highlighted by the Lahore High Court in the case of Basharat Ali v. Special Judge, Anti-Terrorism Court-II, Gujranwala and two others (PLD 2004 Lahore 199) but the judgment in that case had been set aside by the Supreme Court of Pakistan in the case of Mirza Shaukat Baig and others v. Shahid Jamil and others (PLD 2005 SC 530). However, later on in the cases of Mohabbat Ali and another v. The State and another (2007 SCMR 142) and Fazal Dad v. Col. (Rtd.) Ghulam Muhammad Malik and others (PLJ 2008 SC 182) the Supreme Court finally held and reiterated exactly what had been held by the Lahore High Court in Basharat Ali’s case.

Cases based upon personal enmity or private vendetta

1.9 There are cases where gruesome murders or offences of shocking nature are committed by persons on account of an on-going personal enmity or in furtherance of private revenge or vendetta. It has already been held by the Supreme Court of Pakistan that mere gravity or shocking nature of an offence committed in pursuance of personal enmity or in furtherance of private vendetta is not by itself sufficient to brand such offences as terrorism. A reference in this regard may be made to the cases of Mehram Ali and others v. Federation of Pakistan and others (PLD 1998 SC 1445) and Mohabbat Ali and another v. The State and another (2007 SCMR 142).

Jurisdiction of an Anti-Terrorism Court

1.10 Section 21-G of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 provides that “All offences under this Act shall be tried exclusively by the Anti-Terrorism Court established under this Act”. In the cases of Allah Din and 18 others v. The State and another (1994 SCMR 717) and Mumtaz Ali Khan Rajban and another v. Federation of Pakistan and others (PLD 2001 SC 169) it had been held that the jurisdiction of an Anti-Terrorism Court to try a particular case depends not just upon the allegations levelled in the FIR but also upon the statements made by witnesses, the material collected during the investigation and the findings of the investigating agency as a result of the investigation. It is, thus, possible for the investigating agency to conclude in a given case that although allegations vis-à-vis terrorism had also been levelled by the complainant party yet the said allegations had remained unsubstantiated and, therefore, the Challan ought to be submitted before a court of ordinary jurisdiction.

Some offences having no apparent nexus with ‘terrorism’ may also be tried by an Anti-Terrorism Court if such offences are included in the Third Schedule

According to section 12(1) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 “Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code or in any other law, a scheduled offence committed in an area in a Province shall be triable only by Anti-Terrorism Court exercising territorial jurisdiction in relation to such area”. The Third Schedule appended with the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997, as it stands amended at present, contains the following as the scheduled offences:

“1. Any act of terrorism within the meaning of this Act including those offences which may be added or amended in accordance with the provisions of Section 34 of this Act.
2. Any other offence punishable under this Act.
3. Any attempt to commit, or any aid or abetment of, or any conspiracy to commit, any of the aforesaid offences.
4. Without prejudice to the generality of the above paragraph, the Anti-Terrorism Court to the exclusion of any other Court shall try the offences relating to the following, namely:—
   (i) Abduction or kidnapping for ransom;
   (ii) Use of fire-arms or explosives by any device, including bomb blast in a mosque, imambargah, church, temple or any other place of worship, whether or not any hurt or damage is caused thereby; and
   (iii) Firing or use of explosives by any device, including bomb blast in the Court premises.”

It is evident from item number 4 of the Third Schedule that, if included in the said Schedule, even an offence committed for absolutely private motives and having no nexus with ‘terrorism’ is also to be tried by an Anti-Terrorism Court. The case of Rana Abdul Ghaffar v. Abdul Shakoor and 3 others (PLD 2006 Lahore 64) may be referred to in this context.

Joint trial of scheduled and other offences

Section 21-M of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 provides as follows:

“Joint trial.- (1) While trying any offence under this Act, a Court may also try any other offence which an accused may, under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, be charged, at the same trial if the offence is connected with such other offence.
(2) If, in the course of any trial under this Act of any offence it is found that the accused person has committed any other offence under the Act or any other law for the time being in force, the Court may convict an accused for such other offence and pass any sentence authorized by this Act or, as the case may be, such other law, for the punishment thereof."

It is, thus, clear that in an appropriate case an Anti-Terrorism Court has the requisite jurisdiction to try any other offence along with a scheduled offence, if such joint trial is warranted by the circumstances of the case and is authorized by the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Trial of children by an Anti-Terrorism Court

1.13 The Juvenile Justice System Ordinance, 2000 mandates that all offences committed by a ‘child’ are to be tried only by a Juvenile Court and the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 recognizes no distinction between an adult and a child in respect of exclusive jurisdiction of an Anti-Terrorism Court regarding trial of offences of terrorism, etc. This shows that a Juvenile Court has the exclusive jurisdiction over the child’s person whereas an Anti-Terrorism Court has the exclusive jurisdiction to try the offence of terrorism, etc. even where such an offence is committed by a child. It goes without saying that a court having no jurisdiction to try an offence cannot try the accused person even where the accused person falls within the exclusive jurisdiction of such a court. Confronted with such situations it has been held by different courts that a ‘child’ involved in an offence under the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 can be tried only by an Anti-Terrorism Court. A reference in this respect may be made to the cases of Muhammad Din v. Muhammad Jahangir and 4 others (PLD 2004 Lahore 779), Mst. Azra Bibi v. The State through Special Judge, Anti-Terrorism Court, Faisalabad and another (2004 P.Cr.L.J. 1967) and Meraj Hussain and 3 others v. Judge, Anti-Terrorism, Northern Areas, Gilgit and another (2007 P.Cr.L.J. 1011). However, a contrary view has also been taken in this regard by some courts, as is evident from the cases of Ghulam Mustafa Shah alias Papa v. The State (NLR 2003 Criminal 536), Aleem Ashraf v. State (PLJ 2005 Lahore 971) and Qamar Hussain Shah v. The State (PLD 2006 Karachi 331). This issue has not so far been resolved by the Supreme Court of Pakistan and generally the former view is preferred over the latter view.
Chapter 2

Ingredients of section 6 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997

2.1 In its present shape section 6 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 reads as follows:

“(1) In this Act “terrorism” means the use or threat of action where:
(a) the action falls within the meaning of sub-section (2), and
(b) the use or threat is designed to coerce and intimidate or overawe the Government or the public or a section of the public or community or sect or create a sense of fear or insecurity in society; or
(c) the use or threat is made for the purpose of advancing a religious, sectarian or ethnic cause.

(2) An “action” shall fall within the meaning of sub-section (1), if it:
(a) involves the doing of anything that causes death;
(b) involves grievous violence against a person or grievous bodily injury or harm to a person;
(c) involves grievous damage to property;
(d) involves the doing of anything that is likely to cause death or endangers a person’s life;
(e) involves kidnapping for ransom, hostage-taking or hijacking;
(f) incites hatred and contempt on religious, sectarian or ethnic basis to stir up violence or cause internal disturbance;
(g) involves stoning, brick-battling or any other form of mischief to spread panic;
(h) involves firing on religious congregations, mosques, imambargahs, churches, temples and all other places of worship, or random firing to spread panic, or involves any forcible takeover of mosques or other places of worship;
(i) creates a serious risk to safety of the public or a section of the public, or is designed to frighten the general public and thereby prevent them from coming out and carrying on their lawful trade and daily business, and disrupts civic life;
(j) involves the burning of vehicles or any other serious form of arson;
(k) involves extortion of money ("bhatta") or property;
(l) is designed to seriously interfere with or seriously disrupt a communications system or public utility service;
(m) involves serious coercion or intimidation of a public servant in order to force him to discharge or to refrain from discharging his lawful duties; or
(n) involves serious violence against a member of the police force, armed forces, civil armed forces, or a public servant.

(3) The use or threat of use of any action falling within sub-section (2), which involves the use of fire-arms, explosives or any other weapon, is terrorism, whether or not sub-section 1(c) is satisfied.

(4) In this section “action” includes any act done for the benefit of a proscribed organization.

(5) In this Act, terrorism includes any act done for the benefit of a proscribed organization.

(6) A person who commits an offence under this section or any other provision of this Act, shall be guilty of an act of terrorism.

(7) In this Act, a “terrorist” means:

(a) a person who has committed an offence of terrorism under this Act, and is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism;

(b) a person who is or has been, whether before or after the coming into force of this Act, concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism, shall also be included in the meaning given in clause (a) above.”

Sub-section (1) of section 6 reproduced above clearly shows that in order to constitute an offence of ‘terrorism’ the actus reus must fall in either of the categories mentioned in sub-section (2) and that action is taken with the mens rea specified in sub-section (1). No court can accept the prosecution’s allegation regarding ‘terrorism’ unless the prosecution establishes beyond reasonable doubt that the action of the accused person fell within the scope of sub-section (2) and that action had been taken with the intention specified by sub-section (1) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.

2.2 There are three different kinds of mens rea mentioned in sub-section (1) of section 6 of the Act and any one of them can individually suffice for the purposes of the prosecution. The specified mens rea are as follows:

(i) the use or threat of action is designed to coerce and intimidate or overawe the Government or the public or a section of the public or community or sect, or

(ii) the use or threat of action is designed to create a sense of fear or insecurity in society; or

(iii) the use or threat of action is made for the purpose of advancing a religious, sectarian or ethnic cause.

The intention behind his action is always in the mind of the culprit but such intention can be established by the prosecution through the circumstances of a given case. A court shall seldom presume a particular intention on the part of an accused person and the onus shall invariably be on the prosecution to establish this necessary ingredient of the offence of ‘terrorism’. Thus, in all such cases the prosecution must produce independent and reliable evidence before the court in order to establish that the use or threat of action in the given case was designed to coerce and intimidate or overawe the Government or the public or a section of the public or community or sect or the use or threat of action was designed to create a sense of fear or insecurity in society or the use or threat of action was made for the purpose of advancing a religious, sectarian or ethnic cause. The investigating officer in all such cases must, therefore, be conscious of the fact and the prosecution must beware that even if the actus reus is proved before the court no conviction for an offence of ‘terrorism’ can be achieved without simultaneously establishing the requisite mens rea.

2.3 In order to establish the actus reus mentioned in sub-section (2) of section 6 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 an investigating officer and a prosecutor have to collect and then produce before the court sufficient and trustworthy evidence regarding each and every ingredient of the action constituting the relevant offence and failure to prove even one of the many ingredients is bound to result in acquittal of the accused person from the relevant charge. The investigating officers and the prosecutors are, therefore, to remain conscious of all the basic ingredients of the different ‘actions’ mentioned in sub-section (2) of section 6 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 and for facility of reference and by way of a checklist such basic ingredients are detailed as follows:

2.4 Section 6(2)(a): “involves the doing of anything that causes death”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- Something was done by the accused person; and
- the doing of that thing by the accused person had caused the death of the deceased.

2.5 Section 6(2)(b): “involves grievous violence against a person or grievous bodily injury or harm to a person”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- Violence against a person was resorted to; or
- bodily injury or harm was caused to a person; and
- the violence or bodily injury or harm caused was ‘grievous’ as defined in section 2(j) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.

2.6 Section 6(2)(c): “involves grievous damage to property”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- Damage was caused to some property; and
- the damage caused to the property was ‘grievous’ as defined in section 2(j) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.

2.7 Section 6(2)(d): “involves the doing of anything that is likely to cause death or endangers a person’s life”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- Something was done; and
• the doing of that thing was likely to cause death; or
• the doing of that thing was likely to endanger a person’s life.

2.8 Section 6(2)(e): “involves kidnapping for ransom, hostage-taking or hijacking”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

• A person was kidnapped for ransom; and
• such ‘kidnapping for ransom’ attracted the definition contained in section 2(n) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.

• A person was taken as a hostage; and
• such ‘hostage-taking’ fell within the purview of section 2(m) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.

• An aircraft had been hijacked; or
• an attempt was made in that regard; and
• such actual or attempted ‘hijacking’ met the requirements of section 2(l) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.

2.9 Section 6(2)(f): “incites hatred and contempt on religious, sectarian or ethnic basis to stir up violence or cause internal disturbance”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

• The accused person had incited hatred and contempt; and
• such incitement was on religious basis; or
• such incitement was on sectarian basis; or
• such incitement was on ethnic basis; and
• such incitement was meant to stir up violence; or
• such incitement was meant to cause internal disturbance.

2.10 Section 6(2)(g): “involves stoning, brick-batting or any other form of mischief to spread panic”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

• The incident involved stoning; or
• the incident involved brick-batting; or
• the incident involved any other form of mischief; and
• the purpose of the accused person was to spread panic.

2.11 Section 6(2)(h): “involves firing on religious congregations, mosques, imambargahs, churches, temples and all other places of worship, or random firing to spread panic, or involves any forcible takeover of mosques or other places of worship”
Basic ingredients to be proved:

- There was firing on a religious congregation; or
- there was firing on a mosque; or
- there was firing on an imambargah; or
- there was firing on a church; or
- there was firing on a temple; or
- there was firing on any other place of worship; or
- there was random firing; and
- the purpose of such firing was to spread panic; or
- the incident involved takeover of a mosque; or
- the incident involved takeover of any other place of worship; and
- such actual or attempted takeover was forcible.

2.12 Section 6(2)(i): “creates a serious risk to safety of the public or a section of the public, or is designed to frighten the general public and thereby prevent them from coming out and carrying on their lawful trade and daily business, and disrupts civic life”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The incident had created a risk to safety of the public; or
- the incident had created a risk to safety of a section of the public; and
- the risk to safety of the public or a section of the public was ‘serious’ as defined in section 2(w) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997; or
- the incident was designed to frighten the general public; and
- the purpose of such frightening of the general public was to prevent them from coming out and carrying on their lawful trade and daily business; and
- the incident had disrupted civic life.

2.13 Section 6(2)(j): “involves the burning of vehicles or any other serious form of arson”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- Some vehicles were actually burnt during the incident or an attempt was made in that regard; or
- the incident involved arson; and
- the form of arson was ‘serious’ as defined in section 2(w) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.

2.14 Section 6(2)(k): “involves extortion of money (“bhatta”) or property”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The incident involved actual or attempted extortion of money (“bhatta”); or
• the incident involved actual or attempted extortion of property.

2.15 Section 6(2)(l) “is designed to seriously interfere with or seriously disrupt a communications system or public utility service”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

• There was an actual or attempted interference with or disruption of a communications system or a public utility service; and
• the purpose of the accused person was to interfere with a communications system; or
• the purpose of the accused person was to interfere with a public utility service; or
• the intention of the accused person was to disrupt a communications system; or
• the intention of the accused person was to disrupt a public utility service; and
• the actual or intended interference with or disruption of a communications system or public utility service was ‘serious’ as defined in section 2(w) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.

2.16 Section 6(2)(m): “involves serious coercion or intimidation of a public servant in order to force him to discharge or to refrain from discharging his lawful duties”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

• The incident involved a public servant; and
• the public servant was coerced; or
• the public servant was intimidated; and
• the coercion or intimidation was ‘serious’ as defined in section 2(w) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997; and
• the purpose of coercion or intimidation was to force the public servant to discharge his lawful duties; or
• the purpose of coercion or intimidation was to force the public servant to refrain from discharging his lawful duties.

2.17 Section 6(2)(n): “involves serious violence against a member of the police force, armed forces, civil armed forces, or a public servant”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

• There was violence against a member of the police force; or
• there was violence against a member of the armed forces; or
• there was violence against a member of the civil armed forces; or
• there was violence against a public servant; and
• the violence was ‘serious’ as defined in section 2(w) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997.
2.18 The Lahore High Court had held in the case of Taj Muhammad v. Judge, Anti-Terrorism Court and another (PLD 2003 Lahore 588) that every push, shove, scuffle, scratch or bruise involving a member of a force or a public servant does not attract section 6(2)(n) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 unless the violence is proved to be ‘serious’ within the purview of section 2(w) of the said Act.

2.19 In the case of Mehram Ali and others v. Federation of Pakistan and others (PLD 1998 SC 1445) it had been held by the Supreme Court of Pakistan that for the purposes of this offence the member of the force or the public servant concerned should be discharging his official duties at the time of the incident and that this penal provision is not applicable where the member of the force or the public servant concerned is subjected to serious violence at a time when he is available at the spot in his private capacity.

Cases involving suicide bombings

2.20 Cases involving suicide bombings are generally hard cases for the prosecution to prove because the main culprit blowing himself up in pieces often remains unidentified and his motives normally remain shrouded in mystery. It is usually his accomplices or co-conspirators who are brought before the Court for trial and the main evidence produced against them is in respect of hatching of a conspiracy. The investigating officer and the prosecutor of such cases must beware that the evidence of eavesdroppers in that regard is generally looked at by the Courts with suspicion and distrust and a reference in this respect may be made to the cases of Fakku Mian alias Motahar v. The State (1969 SCMR 620) and Farman Ali and others v. The State and others (PLD 2007 Lahore 495). The recoveries affected from the spot often do not connect the conspirators with the offence and the recoveries affected from the conspirators usually do not connect the conspirators with the main culprit. Such recoveries are, thus, likely to be of little evidentiary value before the Court unless the necessary connections are established by the prosecution beyond reasonable doubt.

Cases of sabotage

2.21 The main culprit in cases of sabotage generally remains unseen or, at best, unidentified. Thus, upon his arrest, apart from the other necessary evidence and material, sufficient and reliable evidence also needs to be collected regarding his availability at or very near the place of sabotage at or shortly before the time of occurrence. Holding of a test identification parade in accordance with the legal requirements may also be a sine qua non in such cases.

High profile killings

2.22 It is common experience that after every high profile killing there is a clamour for prompt arrest of the culprits and usually deadlines are fixed in that regard. Fixing of such deadlines and eagerness of the police to meet the same often leads to arrest of some unconnected persons and recording of their confessions which are subsequently retracted. Such arrests and confessions generally defuse the pressure of the deadlines for the time being but more often than not the arrested persons are ultimately acquitted by the Courts for the obvious reason, i.e. lack of sufficient or reliable evidence. It is, therefore, desirable that the pressure upon an investigating officer to solve a particular case should emanate from professional compulsions and must not stem from political or popular hankering.
Chapter 3

Acts intended or likely to stir up Sectarian Hatred

3.1 Section 8 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Prohibition of acts intended or likely to stir up sectarian hatred.- A person who:-

(a) uses threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour; or

(b) displays, publishes or distributes any written material which is threatening, abusive or insulting; or

(c) distributes or shows or plays a recording of visual images or sounds which are threatening, abusive or insulting; or

(d) has in his possession written material or a recording of visual images or sounds which are threatening, abusive or insulting with a view to their being displayed or published by himself or another shall be guilty of an offence if:-

(i) he intends thereby to stir up sectarian hatred; or

(ii) having regard to all the circumstances, sectarian hatred is likely to be stirred up thereby.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- There was a use of threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour; or
- any written material was displayed, published or distributed which material was threatening, abusive or insulting; or
- some recording of visual images or sounds were distributed, shown or played which visual images or sounds were threatening, abusive or insulting; or
- some written material or a recording of visual images or sounds were kept in possession which written material, visual images or sounds were threatening, abusive or insulting; and
- such possession was meant for the written material or recording of visual images or sounds to be displayed or published by the accused person himself or by somebody else; and
- the intention of the accused person was to stir up sectarian hatred; or
- the circumstances of the case showed that sectarian hatred was likely to be stirred up by the above mentioned actions of the accused person.
Chapter 4

Offences in respect of Proscribed Organizations

4.1 Section 11-F of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Membership, support and meetings relating to a Proscribed Organization.- (1) A person is guilty of an offence if he belongs or professes to belong to a proscribed organization.

(2) A person guilty of an offence under sub-section (1) shall be liable on conviction to a term not exceeding six months’ imprisonment and a fine.

(3) A person commits an offence if he-
(a) solicits or invites support for a proscribed organization, and the support is not, or is not restricted to, the provision of money or other property; or
(b) arranges, manages or assists in managing or addressing a meeting which he knows is-
   (i) to support a proscribed organization;
   (ii) to further the activities of a proscribed organization; or
   (iii) to be addressed by a person who belongs or professes to belong to a proscribed organization.

(4) A person commits an offence if he addresses a meeting or delivers a sermon to a religious gathering by any means whether verbal, written, electronic, digital or otherwise, and the purpose of his address or sermon is to encourage support for a proscribed organization or to further its activities.

(5) A person commits an offence if he solicits, collects or raises funds for a proscribed organization.

(6) A person guilty of an offence under sub-sections (3), (4) and (5) shall be liable on conviction to a term of imprisonment not less than one year and not more than five years and a fine.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person belonged or professed to belong to a proscribed organization; or
- he solicited or invited support for a proscribed organization through provision of money or other property or through other means; or
- he arranged a meeting which he knew was to support a proscribed organization; or
- he managed a meeting which he knew was to support a proscribed organization; or
- he assisted in managing or addressing a meeting which he knew was to support a proscribed organization; or he arranged a meeting which he knew was to further the activities of a proscribed organization; or he managed a meeting which he knew was to further the activities of a proscribed organization; or he assisted in managing or addressing a meeting which he knew was to further the activities of a proscribed organization; or he arranged a meeting which he knew was to be addressed by a person who belonged or professed to belong to a proscribed organization; or he managed a meeting which he knew was to be addressed by a person who belonged or professed to belong to a proscribed organization; or he assisted in managing or addressing a meeting which he knew was to be addressed by a person who belonged or professed to belong to a proscribed organization; or he addressed a meeting by any means whether verbal, written, electronic, digital or otherwise; and the purpose of his address was to encourage support for a proscribed organization or to further its activities; or he delivered a sermon to a religious gathering by any means whether verbal, written, electronic, digital or otherwise; and the purpose of his sermon was to encourage support for a proscribed organization or to further its activities; or he solicited funds for a proscribed organization; or he collected funds for a proscribed organization; or he raised funds for a proscribed organization.

4.2 Section 11-G of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Uniform.- (1) A person commits an offence if he-
(a) wears, carries or displays any article, symbol, or any flag or banner connected with or associated with any proscribed organization; or
(b) carries, wears or displays any uniform, item of clothing or dress in such a way or in such circumstances as to arouse reasonable suspicion that he is a member or supporter of a proscribed organization.

(2) A person who commits an offence under sub-section (1) shall be liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to five years or with fine or with both.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person wore any article, symbol, or any flag or banner connected with or associated with any proscribed organization; or
- he carried any article, symbol, or any flag or banner connected with or associated with any proscribed organization; or
- he displayed any article, symbol, or any flag or banner connected with or associated with any proscribed organization; or
• he carried any uniform, item of clothing or dress in such a way or in such circumstances as to arouse reasonable suspicion that he was a member or supporter of a proscribed organization; or
• he wore any uniform, item of clothing or dress in such a way or in such circumstances as to arouse reasonable suspicion that he was a member or supporter of a proscribed organization; or
• he displayed any uniform, item of clothing or dress in such a way or in such circumstances as to arouse reasonable suspicion that he was a member or supporter of a proscribed organization.
Chapter 5

Fund Raising for Terrorism

5.1 Section 11-H of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Fund raising.— (1) A person commits an offence if he-
(a) invites another to provide money or other property, and
(b) intends that it should be used, or has reasonable cause to suspect it may be used, for the purpose of terrorism.

(2) A person commits an offence if-
(a) he receives money or other property, and
(b) intends that it should be used, or has reasonable cause to suspect that it may be used, for the purpose of terrorism.

(3) A person commits an offence if he-
(a) provides money or other property, and
(b) knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that it will or may be used for the purpose of terrorism.

(4) In this section a reference to the provision of money or other property is a reference to its being given, lent or otherwise made available, whether or not for consideration.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person invited another to provide money or other property; and
- he intended that such money or other property should be used for the purpose of terrorism; or
- he had reasonable cause to suspect that such money or other property might be used for the purpose of terrorism; or
- the accused person received money or other property; and
- he intended that such money or other property should be used for the purpose of terrorism; or
- he had reasonable cause to suspect that such money or other property
might be used for the purpose of terrorism; or
- the accused person provided money or other property; and
- he knew that such money or other property would be used for the purpose of terrorism; or
- he knew that such money or other property might be used for the purpose
of terrorism; or
- he had reasonable cause to suspect that such money or other property would be used for the purpose of terrorism; or
- he had reasonable cause to suspect that such money or other property might be used for the purpose of terrorism.
5.2 Section 11-I of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Use and possession.- A person commits an offence if-
(1) he uses money or other property for the purposes of terrorism; or
(2) he-
   (a) possesses money or other property; and
   (b) intends that it should be used, or has reasonable cause to suspect that it may be used, for the purposes of terrorism.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person had used money or other property for the purpose of terrorism; or
- he possessed money or other property; and
- he intended that such money or other property should be used for the purposes of terrorism; or
- he had reasonable cause to suspect that such money or other property might be used for the purposes of terrorism.

5.3 Section 11-J of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Funding arrangements.- (1) A person commits an offence if he-
(a) enters into or becomes concerned in an arrangement as a result of which money or other property is made available or is to be made available to another, and
(b) has reasonable cause to suspect that it will or may be used for the purposes of terrorism.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person entered into an arrangement as a result of which money or other property was made available to another; or
- he became concerned in an arrangement as a result of which money or other property was made available to another; or
- he entered into an arrangement as a result of which money or other property was to be made available to another; or
- he became concerned in an arrangement as a result of which money or other property was to be made available to another; and
- he had reasonable cause to suspect that such money or other property would be used for the purposes of terrorism; or
- he had reasonable cause to suspect that such money or other property might be used for the purposes of terrorism.
Chapter 6

Money-laundering of Terrorist Property

6.1 Section 11-K of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Money-laundering.— (1) A person commits an offence if he enters into or becomes concerned in any arrangement which facilitates the retention and control, by or on behalf of another person, of terrorist property-
(a) by concealment,
(b) by removal from the jurisdiction,
(c) by transfer to nominees, or
(d) in any other way.
(2) It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under sub-section (1) to prove that he did not know and had no reasonable cause to suspect that the arrangement related to terrorist property.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person entered into any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control by another person of terrorist property by concealment; or
- he became concerned in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control by another person of terrorist property by concealment; or
- he entered into in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control on behalf of another person of terrorist property by concealment; or
- he became concerned in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control on behalf of another person of terrorist property by concealment.

- The accused person entered into any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control by another person of terrorist property by removal from the jurisdiction; or
- he became concerned in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control by another person of terrorist property by removal from the jurisdiction; or
- he entered into in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control on behalf of another person of terrorist property by removal from the jurisdiction; or
- he became concerned in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control on behalf of another person of terrorist property by removal from the jurisdiction.
• The accused person entered into any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control by another person of terrorist property by transfer to nominees; or
• he became concerned in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control by another person of terrorist property by transfer to nominees; or
• he entered into in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control on behalf of another person of terrorist property by transfer to nominees; or
• he became concerned in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control on behalf of another person of terrorist property by transfer to nominees.

• The accused person entered into any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control by another person of terrorist property in any other way; or
• he became concerned in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control by another person of terrorist property in any other way; or
• he entered into in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control on behalf of another person of terrorist property in any other way; or
• he became concerned in any arrangement which facilitated the retention and control on behalf of another person of terrorist property in any other way.
Chapter 7

Directing Terrorist Activities

7.1 Section 11-V of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Directing terrorist activities.- (1) A person commits an offence if he-
(a) directs, at any level, whilst resident in Pakistan or abroad, activities of an organization concerned with the preparation, instigation or commission of acts of terrorism; or
(b) directs, from within the country or abroad, activities connected with the commission, preparation or instigation of an act of terrorism.

(2) A person guilty of an offence under sub-section (1) shall be liable on conviction to imprisonment for life and to forfeiture or confiscation of his assets within or outside Pakistan.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

• The accused person directed, at any level, whilst resident in Pakistan, activities of an organization concerned with the preparation of acts of terrorism; or
• he directed, at any level, whilst resident abroad, activities of an organization concerned with the preparation of acts of terrorism; or
• he directed, at any level, whilst resident in Pakistan, activities of an organization concerned with the instigation of acts of terrorism; or
• he directed, at any level, whilst resident abroad, activities of an organization concerned with the instigation of acts of terrorism; or
• he directed, at any level, whilst resident in Pakistan, activities of an organization concerned with the commission of acts of terrorism; or
• he directed, at any level, whilst resident abroad, activities of an organization concerned with the commission of acts of terrorism; or
• he directed, from within the country, activities connected with the commission of an act of terrorism; or
• he directed, from abroad, activities connected with the commission of an act of terrorism; or
• he directed, from within the country, activities connected with the preparation of an act of terrorism; or
• he directed, from abroad, activities connected with the preparation of an act of terrorism; or
• he directed, from within the country, activities connected with the instigation of an act of terrorism; or
• he directed, from abroad, activities connected with the instigation of an act of terrorism; or
• he directed, from within the country, activities connected with the preparation of an act of terrorism; or
• he directed, from abroad, activities connected with the preparation of an act of terrorism; or
• he directed, from within the country, activities connected with the instigation of an act of terrorism; or
• he directed, from abroad, activities connected with the instigation of an act of terrorism; or
7.2 Section 11-W of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Printing, publishing or disseminating any material to incite hatred or giving projection to any person convicted for a terrorist act or any proscribed organization or an organization placed under observation or anyone concerned in terrorism.- (1) A person commits an offence if he prints, publishes or disseminates any material, whether by audio or video-cassettes or by written, photographic, electronic, digital, wall-chalking or any other method which incites religious, sectarian or ethnic hatred or gives projection to any person convicted for a terrorist act, or any person or organization concerned in terrorism or proscribed organization or an organization placed under observation:

Provided that a factual news report, made in good faith, shall not be construed to mean “projection” for the purposes of this section.

(2) Any person guilty of an offence under sub-section (1) shall be punished on conviction with imprisonment which may extend to five years and with fine.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person printed any material; or
- he published any material; or
- he disseminated any material by audio-cassette; or
- he disseminated any material by video-cassette; or
- he disseminated any written material; or
- he disseminated any photographic material; or
- he disseminated any electronic material; or
- he disseminated any digital material; or
- he disseminated any material through wall-chalking; or
- he disseminated any material through any other method; and
- such material incited religious hatred; or
- such material incited sectarian hatred; or
- such material incited ethnic hatred; or
- such material gave projection to any person convicted for a terrorist act; or
- such material gave projection to any person concerned in terrorism; or
- such material gave projection to any proscribed organization; or
- such material gave projection to an organization placed under observation.
Chapter 8

Responsibility for Creating Civil Commotion

8.1 Section 11-X of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Responsibility for creating civil commotion.—(1) A person commits an offence if he makes any call for action or shut-down, imposed through the use or threat of force resulting in damage or destruction of property or injury to person, to intimidate citizens and prevent them from carrying out their lawful trade or business activity.

(2) A person guilty of an offence under sub-section (1) shall on conviction be punishable with imprisonment for a term not less than five years and not more than ten years and shall pay compensation as may be determined by the Court, from the funds of the organization to which he belongs or from his own personal resources or assets for the hurt or damage or destruction caused as a result of the commission of the offence under sub-section (1).

(3) A person commits an offence of he addresses a meeting or gathering or delivers a sermon to religious gathering by any means whether verbal, written, electronic, digital or otherwise to incite religious, sectarian or ethnic hatred and contempt, and shall, on conviction, be punishable with imprisonment for not less than five years and not more than ten years or with fine or with both.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person made any call for action; or
- he made any call for shut-down; and
- the call was imposed through the use of force; or
- the call was imposed through the threat of force; and
- as a result of such call and its imposition some damage of property had been caused; or
- as a result of such call and its imposition some destruction of property had been caused; or
- as a result of such call and its imposition some injury to any person had been caused; and
- the motive on the part of the accused person was to intimidate citizens and to prevent them from carrying out their lawful trade or business activity.

- The accused person addressed a meeting; or
- he delivered a sermon to religious gathering; and
- such address or sermon was delivered by any means whether verbal, written, electronic, digital or otherwise; and
• his motive was to incite religious hatred and contempt; or
• his motive was to incite sectarian hatred and contempt; or
• his motive was to incite ethnic hatred and contempt.
Chapter 9

Disclosure about or Interference with Terrorist Investigation

9.1 Section 21-A(6) of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Where a person knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that a terrorist investigation is being conducted or is proposed to be conducted, a person commits an offence if he-
(a) discloses to another, or others, anything which is likely to prejudice an investigation; or
(b) interferes with material which is likely to be relevant to an investigation.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

• The accused person knew that a terrorist investigation was being conducted; or
• he knew that a terrorist investigation was proposed to be conducted; and
• he disclosed to another, or others, anything which was likely to prejudice the investigation; or
• he interfered with material which was likely to be relevant to the investigation.
Chapter 10

Weapons Training and Training in Terrorism

10.1 Section 21-C of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Training.—(1) Weapons Training: A person commits an offence if he provides, without valid authorization from the competent authority, any instruction or training in the making or use of-
(a) fire-arms;
(b) explosives; or
(c) chemical, biological, and other weapons.

(2) A person commits an offence if he provides, without valid authorization from the competent authority, any instruction or training to any child under sub-section (1) and, upon conviction, shall be liable to a term of imprisonment of not less than ten years and fine.

(3) A person commits an offence if he receives instruction or training from anyone, without valid authorization from the competent authority, to give such instruction or training or invites another, specifically or generally, to receive such unauthorized instruction or training in the making or use of-
(a) fire-arms;
(b) explosives; or
(c) chemical, biological, and other weapons.

(4) A child commits an offence if he provides, without valid authorization from the competent authority, any instruction or training, or if he receives such unauthorized instruction or training or invites another, specifically or generally, to receive such unauthorized instruction or training in the making or use of-
(a) fire-arms;
(b) explosives; or
(c) chemical, biological, and other weapons.

(5) A child guilty of an offence under sub-section (4) shall be liable on conviction to imprisonment for a term not less than six months and not exceeding five years.

(6) A person guilty of an offence under sub-sections (1) and (3) shall be liable on conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or fine or with both.

(7) Training in terrorism—
(a) A person commits an offence if he provides, generally or specifically, any instruction or training in acts of terrorism.

(b) A person commits an offence if he receives any instruction or training in acts of terrorism or invites another, specifically or generally, to receive such instruction or training.
(c) A person guilty of an offence under sub-sections (a) and (b) shall, on conviction, be liable to imprisonment of either description for a term of not less than one year and not more than ten years and fine.

(d) A person is guilty of an offence if he provides any instruction or training in acts of terrorism to a child and shall be liable on conviction to imprisonment of either description for a term not less than one year and not more than ten years and fine.

(e) A child commits an offence if he provides, generally or specifically, any instruction or training in acts of terrorism and, on conviction, shall be liable to imprisonment for a term not less than six months and not more than five years.

(f) A child commits an offence if he receives, generally or specifically, instruction or training in acts of terrorism and, on conviction, shall be liable to imprisonment for a term not less than six months and not more than five years.

(8) A Court by which a person is convicted of an offence under this section, may order the forfeiture of any thing or property which it considers to have been in the person’s possession for purposes connected with the offence, after giving any person, other than the convicted person, who claims to be the owner or is otherwise interested, an opportunity of being heard.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person had provided any instruction or training in the making or use of fire-arms, explosives or chemical, biological, and other weapons; and
- he had no valid authorization from the competent authority to impart such instruction or training.

- The accused person had provided any instruction or training to any child in the making or use of fire-arms, explosives or chemical, biological, and other weapons; and
- he had no valid authorization from the competent authority to impart such instruction or training.

- The accused person had received instruction or training from anyone to give such instruction or training, specifically or generally, in the making or use of fire-arms, explosives or chemical, biological, and other weapons; or
- he had invited some other person, specifically or generally, to receive such unauthorized instruction or training in the making or use of fire-arms, explosives or chemical, biological, and other weapons; and
- he had no valid authorization from the competent authority in that regard.
• The accused person was a child; and
• he had provided any instruction or training in the making or use of fire-arms, explosives or chemical, biological, and other weapons; or
• he had received such unauthorized instruction or training in the making or use of fire-arms, explosives or chemical, biological, and other weapons; or
• he had invited another, specifically or generally, to receive such unauthorized instruction or training in the making or use of fire-arms, explosives or chemical, biological, and other weapons; and
• he had no valid authorization from the competent authority in that regard.

• The accused person had provided, generally or specifically, any instruction or training in acts of terrorism; or
• he had received any instruction or training in acts of terrorism; or
• he had invited another, specifically or generally, to receive such instruction or training; or
• he had provided any instruction or training in acts of terrorism to a child.

• The accused person was a child; and
• he had provided, generally or specifically, any instruction or training in acts of terrorism; or
• he had received, generally or specifically, instruction or training in acts of terrorism.
Chapter 11

Conditional Admissibility of Confession

11.1 Section 21-H of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Conditional admissibility of confession.—Notwithstanding anything contained in the Qanoon-e-Shahadat, 1984 (President’s Order No. 10 of 1984) or any other law for the time being in force, where in any Court proceedings held under this Act the evidence (which includes circumstantial and other evidence) produced raises the presumption that there is a reasonable probability that the accused has committed the offence, any confession made by the accused during the investigation without being compelled, before a police officer not below the rank of a District Superintendent of Police, may be admissible in evidence against him, if the Court so deems fit.

Provided that the District Superintendent of Police before recording any such confession had explained to the person making it that he is not bound to make a confession and that if he does so it may be used as evidence against him and that no District Superintendent of Police has recorded such confession unless, upon questioning the person making it, the District Superintendent of Police had reason to believe that it was made voluntarily; and that when he recorded the confession, he made a memorandum at the foot of such record to the following effect:

“I have explained to (--- name ---) that he is not bound to make a confession and that, if he does so, any confession he may make may be used as evidence against him and I believe that this confession was voluntarily made. It was taken in my presence, and was read over to the person making it and admitted by him to be correct, and it contains a full and true account of the statement made by him.”

(Signed)
Superintendent of Police”

11.2 A confession made before the police is generally inadmissible in evidence and according to Article 38 of the Qanun-e-Shahadat Order, 1984 “No confession made to a police officer shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence”. However, section 21-H of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 makes such a confession conditionally admissible in evidence if the following requirements are met:

- The proceedings being conducted before the Court must be under the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997; and
• the Court holding the proceedings comes to a conclusion that the admissible evidence produced raises the presumption that there is a reasonable probability that the accused person has committed the offence; and
• the confession made by the accused person during the investigation was made before a police officer not below the rank of a District Superintendent of Police; and
• the Court finds that the confession was made by the accused person without being compelled; and
• the Court deems it fit in the circumstances of the case to consider the evidence of confession.

11.3 The admissibility of a confession before the police is, thus, contingent upon the Court’s satisfaction about reasonable probability of involvement of the accused person in the offence established before Court through the other admissible evidence, the confession having been made before a senior police officer, the voluntary nature of the confession and the overall discretion of the Court in the matter of admitting the confession in evidence.

11.4 The safeguards provided in this section for ensuring voluntary nature of the confession and maintenance of correct record of the same are as follows:

• Before recording any confession the District Superintendent of Police has to explain to the person making it that he is not bound to make a confession; and
• before recording any confession the District Superintendent of Police has to explain to the person making it that if he makes a confession then it may be used as evidence against him; and
• upon questioning the person making the confession the District Superintendent of Police has reason to believe that it is being made voluntarily; and
• after having recorded the confession the District Superintendent of Police has to make a memorandum in the prescribed form at the foot of such record.
Chapter 12

Aiding, Abetting and Harbouring

12.1 Section 21-I of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Aid and abetment.- Whoever aids or abets any offence under this Act shall be punished with maximum term of same imprisonment provided for the offence or the fine provided for such offence or with both.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person had aided the offence; or
- he had abetted the offence.

12.2 In a case involving suicide bombing the main culprit is dead and in a case of sabotage the main culprit is usually unidentified or untraceable. However, in such cases, in the absence of the main culprit, it is not a legal impossibility to try, convict and punish only the persons aiding or abetting the main culprit.

12.3 Section 21-J of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Harbouring.- (1) A person commits an offence if he harbours any person who has committed an offence under this Act.
(2) A person guilty of an offence under sub-section (1) shall be liable on conviction to punishment as provided in Section 216 and 216-A of the Pakistan Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860).”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The accused person had harboured a person; and
- the person harbourled had committed an offence under this Act.

12.4 The words “who has committed an offence under this Act” do not mean that the person harbourled should be a person who has already been convicted for an offence under this Act. A person accused of committing an offence under this Act is also included in the purview of this section.
Chapter 13

Absconder

13.1 Section 21-L of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Whoever being accused of an offence under this Act, absconds and avoids arrest or evades appearance before any inquiry, investigation or Court proceedings or conceals himself, and obstructs the course of justice, shall be liable to imprisonment for a term not less than five years and not more than ten years or with fine or with both.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- The person concerned was accused of an offence under this Act; and
- he had absconded; or
- he had avoided arrest; or
- he had evaded appearance before an inquiry; or
- he had evaded an investigation; or
- he had evaded Court proceedings; or
- he had concealed himself; and
- he had obstructed the course of justice.

13.2 A trial in absentia is generally considered to be unconstitutional but in the case of Haji Muhammad v. The State (PLD 2003 SC 262) the Supreme Court of Pakistan had held that a wilful absconcion in order to obstruct the course of justice may still be culpable.

13.3 In order to establish that the accused person had indeed become an absconder the prosecution must prove that all the necessary steps warranted by sections 87 and 88 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 had in fact been taken and all the requisite formalities in that regard had in fact been complied with.
Chapter 14

Defective Investigation

14.1 Section 27 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997:

“Punishment for defective investigation.- If an Anti-Terrorism Court or a High Court comes to the conclusion during the course of or at the conclusion of the trial that the investigating officer or other concerned officers have failed to carry out the investigation properly or diligently or have failed to pursue the case properly and in breach of their duties, it shall be lawful for such Court or, as the case may be, High Court to punish the delinquent officers with imprisonment which may extend to two years or with fine or with both by resort to summary proceedings.”

Basic ingredients to be proved:

- An Anti-Terrorism Court or a High Court had come to a conclusion; and
- such conclusion had been reached during the course of or at the conclusion of the trial; and
- the conclusion was that the investigating officer had failed to carry out the investigation properly; or
- the conclusion was that the investigating officer had failed to carry out the investigation diligently; or
- the conclusion was that the investigating officer had failed to pursue the case properly; or
- the conclusion was that the investigating officer had committed breach of his duties; or
- the conclusion was that the other concerned officers had failed to carry out the investigation properly; or
- the conclusion was that the other concerned officers had failed to carry out the investigation diligently; or
- the conclusion was that the other concerned officers had failed to pursue the case properly; or
- the conclusion was that the other concerned officers had committed breach of their duties;
CONCLUSION

1. It must be appreciated and understood by every investigating officer and prosecutor that mere satisfaction of the police regarding catching hold of the real culprit is not by itself sufficient to clinch his conviction because a Court has to administer justice in accordance with the law and not in terms of satisfaction of the police.

2. It is elementary in criminal law that, except in cases of strict liability offences, in order to constitute a criminal offence the mens rea on the part of the accused person must coincide with the actus reus and also that each and every ingredient of the relevant offence must independently be proved by the prosecution beyond reasonable doubt before any conviction of the accused person can be secured in a Court of law. Every investigating officer and prosecutor must, therefore, always be conscious that lack or insufficiency of proof of even one of the necessary ingredients of the relevant offence is bound to entail acquittal of the accused person.

3. Acts of terrorism often involve brutality of the most vicious kind but it must be realized by all concerned that despite the brutality of the accused person alleged in a case of terrorism the Court trying the case would still not be ready to brutalize justice by ignoring or disregarding the law of evidence. The importance of fulfilling the requirements of the law of evidence in all such cases, therefore, cannot be overstated.

4. Finally, all concerned with investigation of such cases must beware that any serious lapse in the investigation of such cases committed by an investigating officer or other concerned officer may entail appropriate punishment of imprisonment or fine or both under section 27 of the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 besides taking of departmental disciplinary action against him in that regard.

National Police Bureau

The National Police Bureau is a statutory body mandated to act as a national focal point on all police-related matters. The Bureau coordinates and monitors the state of implementation of police reforms, as envisaged in Police Order 2002, across Pakistan. Though the National Police Bureau is an integral part of the Ministry of Interior, it has a separate budget. Director General of the Bureau has full financial and administrative powers.

Vision

Reshaping Police into a professionally competent, operationally neutral and publicly accountable service-delivery organization.

Mission

Building standards for professional policing, and acting as a national think tank on issues relating to criminal justice reform, public safety and police information technology.
